

SAMOA

Samoa is an archipelago in the South Pacific consisting of 10 islands, of which only four are inhabited. The main islands of Upolu and Savai'i are fringed by magnificent coral reefs and lagoons, overlooked by volcanic peaks. Inland, the rugged interior hides lush rainforests, cascading waterfalls, steep gorges and crystal clear cave pools. Upolu is the most populated of Samoa's two main islands and home to Faleolo International Airport (APW) and the harbor capital of Apia.

Must see sites that are within easy reach of Apia include Robert Louis Stevenson's Museum, the Samoa Cultural Village, Palolo Deep Marine Reserve, Piula Cave Pools and the Papase'ea Sliding Rocks. Robert Louis Stevenson, known as 'Tusitala' (Samoan for 'teller of tales') spent his final years in Samoa where he wrote most of his books, including Treasure Island. His beautiful mansion Vailima has been converted into a museum and is open to the public.

Visitors can also visit his grave located at the top of Mt Vaea along a trail named by the locals as "The Road of the Loving Heart". For those more adventurous, head to the south side of the island where you will discover Lalomanu Beach, named one of the ten most beautiful beaches in the world and To Sua Ocean Trench, a 30 metre deep crater filled with sea water. The Trench is surrounded by beautiful gardens and is a popular picnic spot. The 'big island' of Savai'i is reached by an inter-island ferry which takes approximately an hour or a 10 minute charter flight. Savai'i is less populated than Upolu and is known for its gentle and traditional way of life, pristine scenery and key archaeological sites.

On Savai'i, you will discover the alien-like landscape of Saleaula Lava Fields and the Virgin's Grave, the stunning Afu Aau Waterfall and the spectacular Alofaaga Blowholes. A well paved road encircles the island making it easy to explore and access these sites. Overcome your fear of heights at the Falealupo Rainforest Canopy Walk. Climb the Banyan Tree and cross the suspension bridge for a great view of the rainforest and Savai'i coastline. Through the Rainforest is Cape Mulinu'u, one of the last places in Samoa where you will see the sunset.
